

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS FOR JANKI

The multiple impacts of climate change remain one of the glaring facts of our times compelling us to probe into our past actions in order to revise our measures for a better future. Each individual feels a sense of personal responsibility to combat the ways to counter the effects of environmental disasters with which we are being confronted. Within this context the concept of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam enhances the idea of one world one family thereby propagating collective action for a more coercive path of change and a search for alternative means of sustainability.

Living in a post Covid world we as citizens of the earth have begun to perceive life in a way that is perhaps in multiples ways dependent on technology. This has opened up a means to a globalised digital life experience that is proving to be unstoppable. AI, ChatGPT have virtually brought humans to accept the humongous possibilities of technology as both a resource and intrusion in our personal and professional lives. Questions around mental health, relationships and the condition of women augur a reality check in this world of unbridled technological advancements.

Janki the College Magazine of Janki Devi Memorial College invites submissions on the stated themes. The following themes and subthemes can be explored:
